THE COURTS

The Case of Monfalconi and the Murder in Palermo.

SEIZURE OF HUMAN HAIR.

turday is generally a dull day in the courts there being only sessions of the Chambers; but yesterday it was unprecedentedly dull, there not being an item of interest in the civil branch of the courts. The coming week promises to be lively enough, with the Kelly-Havemeyer libel suit, the trial of Coroner Croker and of various liquor lealers indicted for seiling liquor without license. Some person of perversely peculating proclivi-ties took advantage of the absence of Mr. Sinclair, the cierk of Supreme Court, Chambers, from his deak and rifled his drawer. The booty was not much-about $1 is fractional currency and some half dozen cigars. Mr. Sinclair is not snowing as much as he was.

THE PALERMO MURDER

Yesterday Glovanni Monfalconi, who is tharged with having murdered Vincenso Tramontano in Paiermo, Italy, under the circumstances already stated in the HERALD, was again brough for exmination before Commissioner Kenneta G White. he fact that the prisoner had made a determined but unsuccessful attempt to escape from Ludlow Street Jail (the particulars of which were published in the Herald of yesterday), caused a good many persons to be present in the examination room, the purpose of learning if there were any new developments, but none transpired, so fir as the prisoner's attempt at escape is concernet. Since the last examination Monfalconi has shaved of his beard and mustache, and he certainly ooks the worse for his imprisonment. He was heavly hand-cuffed and was guarded by two or three deputy marshals.

When the case was called on Commissioner White asked counsel what they proposed to do white asked counsel what they proposed to do with it?

Counsel for the prisoner replied that he rested his case, unless counsel for the Italian government had more testimony to offer.

Counsel for the Italian government ebserved that probably they could now go on with their arguments in regard to the authentication of the documents. Did counsel object to these?

Mr. Spencer—I do.

Mr. Coudert—I have other documents and will bring them up on Monday.

Commissioner White—Very well; I will adjourn the case until twelve o'clock on Monday, and I have to say that, in case I should hold the centricates are sufficient, I wish you both to sum up he case, because there are five or six of these extradition cases pending before me.

Counsel stated that they would accede willingly to the wish of the Commissioner, Mr. Spencer observing that, in all probability, he would take the matter before Judge Blatchford, on a writ of certiferar!

missioner White-If you do that II will reheve me considerably.

The matter stands adjourned accordingly until Menday (to-morrow).

HUMAN HAIR SEIZED.

Yesterday, in the United States Circuit Court, Judge Woodruff rendered a decision in the case of United States vs. Four Packages of Human Hair, seized by Custom House officers. He says:— The question whether the information herein suf-Sciently avers a seizure within the Southern district of New York was not raised in the District Court, either by demurrer or by motion in arrest of judgment, and it cannot, therefore, be made a question in this Court. As there was no plea as to the jurisdiction of the Court, and, as no issue was made up for trial upon the question where the setzure was made, there was no issue on that point to be tried, and the point taken by the claimants that the piaintif had not proved a seizure within this district was properly denied. Adverting to goods brought into port in the baggage of passengers the Judge says:—"If the claimants, by concealing the contents of the boxes from the officers of the ship and by omitting to furnish an account of such contents, so that they might be entered on the manifest, expose the goods to the hazard of being landed without lawful permit, they have no recourse to the officers of the ship for illegally landing the goods; but when the officers of the customs found the goods thus landed, and the claimants themselves on the dock claiming the soil of the property as baggage. Judgment of the District Court affirmed, with costs." Court, either by demurrer or by motion in arrest of

When questioned he said he had been a theological student on the other side; but, finding he had no vocation for the priesthood, he had decided not to take ordera. He denied the charge which the officer preferred against him when that functionary accused him of lying down in the gritter. He explained all to the Judge in the letter. The Judge, after advising him to return to theology and shun gin, gave him a discharge.

On Wednesday night Officer Corcoran, of the New street station, went bome sick, and on Thanksgiving Day he managed to get down to a barber shop in the store of the house in which he lives. While sitting there waiting for his "turn" the John Stack Musketeers, dressed up as ragamumns, appeared, and Corcoran, together with the rest of the party, went out on the sidewalk to see the snow. He was in his shirt sleeves, and his we the snow. He was in his shirt sleeves, and his watch chain being exposed some of the young ruffians suatened his watch. On Friday Detective Borsey, of the Sixth precinct, noticed two young chaps coming out of a "lenee" in Baxter street. He followed them, and presently they went into another pawnshop. They came out, and still he followed them. At last they suspected him and started to run, but Borsey caught them both. When brought to court one gave his name as Harry Jones and the other as Jim Larkin. Jones is known to the police as Pat Byron, and Larkin's right name is Clarke. They were held to answer by the Judge in default of $5,000 each.

omeer Robinson, of the Seventeenth precinct, who, on hearing the circumstances, advised the arrest of the young girl, Maivins Bauer. As soon as Maivins was taken into custody she confessed ner guilt to Mme. Noe and also offered to tell where the missing articles could be found. The young girl then stated to her employer that she had been intimately acquainted with a man named Peter Jourdan for some three years past, and that he had induced her to bring anything she could steal to his apartments and that he would dispose of the property. Officer Robinson thereupon proceeded to the residence of the man Jourdan, at No. 81 avenue C, and there found a portion of the identical property that had been stolen from Mme. Noe. Jourdan was arrested and brought before Judge Wandell yesterday, who held him in $2,000 ball to answer on a charge of receiving stolen goods. Jourdan, the prisoner, is a man about forty years of age, and says he is a patuter by trade. Maivins Bauer was held in $500 ball to answer on a charge of petit larceay. In her possession at the time of her arrest was found the following unique letter, which she claims to have received from Peter Jourdan about ten days ago:—

My Own Dramest Malvina—The time sime Saurday morning when I had the great pleasure to see you last, has been so long and lonesome to me that I got to take this opportunity to write a few lines to you and to find out why you did not favor me with your presence since, and whether everything is all right on your part; whether your affection is similar to mine; whether it is the same as before, or perhaps got a little warmer in the meantime. As far as I am concerned I cannot get it of the dida that you are the only one in this wide world able to make me nappy for all the days of my life by being mine until death parts us. I have to tell you about a dream I had last night you appeared to me in the shape of a smail, medest looking bird, in a lot of bir, fine looking birds, with beautiful feathers, and it was as if some triends asked, me which one of these birds I would choose and I chose you. It was as if I lett your tender little hand pressed on my heart. I was not able to see or speak, and when I got awake I felt a tear on the place where I lett your hand before. I do not know the meaning of such a dream, but I hope it only means good, and I hope the time when this bird will be mine will not be far off. I am so excited and my mine is so disturbed thinking of you all the time that the tears make me drop the pen. I remain yours till death.

Proceedings Wherein the Way of the Transgressor is Hard. Before Judge Moore and Associate Justices.

Yesterday several prisoners who had been pre-viously convicted were arraigned in the Court of Sessions and sentenced. The first prisoner arraigned was an Englishman, William Dexter, grand larceny. He told the Judge, whom he addressed as "My Lord," that he had nothing to say further than that he threw himself on the mercy of the Court, as he was a total stranger in the country. The Judge reminded Dexter that country. The Judge reminded Dexter that the old man whom he had robued of a large amount of money had befriended him by giving him the hospitality of his house upon his arrival. The prisoner had been drinking with the old gentleman, and the latter was arrested and locked up for intoxication. Dexter then made his way to his friend's house and robbed him. The Court sentenced mim to the Penitentiary for three years and six months.

David Davids, a thick headed colored boy, who was convicted of stealing cloth from his employer, but was recommended to mercy by the jury, was remanded, with a view to obtaining time to ascertain if the prisoner's friends would again receive him. The Judge said David was a lazy fellow, and they fild not want any lazy men in the Penitentiary.

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING.

The Marriage of P. G. Newlands and Clara A Sharon at San Francisco.

The Ceremony Performed by an Archbishop.

San Francisco, Nov. 20, 1874.

The clite of the city at the Golden Gate were in a most unusual flutter last evening. The experiences of the past year may have somewhat inured the people of the East to the contemplation of a great matrimonial event, but the me-tropolis of the Pacific coast was scarcely prepared for this. The weeding of Miss Clara A. Sharon, daughter of the monarch of the Comstock mine, to Mr. Frank G. Newlands, has been the fruitful theme of gossip for more than a month. All the anxiety, all the preparation of this interval, cul-minated last evening, at which time the ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Arch-bishop Alemany at the house of the bride's father.

were sent out during the latter part of October. They were worded as follows, unostentations in form and appearance, printed in the usual engraved script on satin paper, seven by four and a half inches in size, and bore in the upper left hand corner the initials of the bride and groom in monogram. The same monogram was also on the

THE FLORAL DECORATIONS.

The house was prolusely decorated with flowers from top to bottom, In all the corners of the dancing room tropical plants were placed in rustic borders—palms of many kinds, all sorts of delicate ferns, orange trees, cedars and rare exotic shrubs of every description. There had been prepared for the musicians below a sort of bower surrounded by cedars, but as this proved to be too small for the score of players they overflowed it, playing, however, quite as well in front. On the library table stood a cage covered with a mass of carnations and camelias, surrounded by carnations of various hues, in rows neatly arranged and interspersed with camelias. Baske's containing violets, heliotropes, roses, camelias, tuberoses, jeasmine, mignonetic and other flowers, stood on all the tables and bookeases and in front of all the mirrors in the house. The bower in which the newly married pair received the congratulations of their ricends was what an enturstastic reporter might be permitted to call a triumph of floral grt. It stood at the east end of the grand drawing room. The shape was that of the grand drawing room. The shape was that of the grand drawing rooms. The bape was that of the grand drawing rooms. The tollets were all extremely claborate and elegant.

The bridgeroom being a Protestant, the marriage was what the Casholic Church terms a "mixed" one, and could not, therefore, be solemnized according to the ordinary rites of the Church. There are, nowever, special services, plain and simple, which are used on similar occasions. The one used was the Baltimore service, not the one commonly employed in solemnizing mixed marriages in California. Archibishop Alemany came some time before eight o'clock, attended by Pather Acolit, S. J.; Pather Plous, O. P., and Pather Hyacinth Durham, O. P. Unly the last two assisted. As the time for the ceremony approached, the guests ranged themselves up and down the sides of the drawing room, by the whole length of which the bridal party was to pass.

At a quarter past eight o'clock in the evening feo orchestra, statuoned just out of the drawing room, began the "Wedding March," from the "Missummer Night's Dream," and at once all fluttering was husbed; for it was known that the bridal party was approaching. Elsnop Alemany stationed himself under the floral arch erected at the nead of the drawing room, his assistants arranging themself under the floral arch erected at the nead of the drawing room, his assistants arranging themself under the floral arch erected at the nead of the drawing room, his assistants arranging themself under the floral arch erected at the nead of the drawing room, his assistants are approaching, the floral chapting of three couples only, entere

The Archbishop and his assistants having retired from under the floral canopy the newly married husband and wie, having first embraced each other, took the place thus vacated. The lady then received the kisses and congratulations of her friends with a little gusn of natural emotion. The guesta after greeting the couple, distributed themselves through the rooms, and dancing was soon commenced.

The following were the most noticeable among the valuable presents offered the bride:—A magnificant flower stand, of solid gold and sliver, from Mrs. W. Raiston. An elegant pearl fan of point lace, from miss Pattle Sharon, cousin of the bride. A beautiful gold locket, set with pearls and dismonds, from miss Clara Sharon, An elegant erruscan, consisting of necklace, carrings and cross. THE ERCEPTION.

Soon after nine o'clock the guests began to arrive at the reception. They entered by the west door, a carpet having been laid to the curbstone. The mansion, with the great iamps burning at both entrances and brilliantly illuminated, presented an elegant appearance from without. The grounds were illuminated with several hundred Chinese lanterns. Therear balconies were enclosed, carpeted, turnished with chairs and supplied with refreshments. Ordinary wines, liquors of various kinds and lemonade were distributed about the house from the earliest hour, that all might partake who so desired.

The guests continued steadily to arrive from nine o'clock until half-past eleven. They were so equally scattered about the house that, although at least eight hundred must have been present when all had gathered, there was no confusion nor crowding anywhere.

SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS.

The Memorial to the Police Sourd-What the Commissioners Say-Action of the Sabbath Committee.

A memorial to the Police Commissioners, calling their attention to the flagrant violation of the law in the allowance of theatrical amusements on Sunday, was published in the morning papers yesterday. This memorial has appended to it the names of a number of prominent citizens, representative men of nearly every department of social life, and included a representation of the dramatic interest in the names of Mr. Lester Wallack and Mr. Dion Boucicault. In order to ascertain what action would be taken by the Police Commissioners consequent on the presentation of a memorial so influentially signed, a reporter of the Herald called at Police Headquarters yesterday and had a short interview with President Matsell and Commissioner Voorhies. Both these gentlemen said that the memorial had not been presented to the Board, and their first knowledge of its existence was when they read it in the morning papers. They expressed an opinion that it was rather discourteous on the part of the memorialists to deler the presentation until after the publication. As to any action of the Board in regard to Sunday theatrical performances, whatever may be the desire of the Board in that regard the many injunctions which had been obtained restraining any police interference would prevent them at present giving the question any official consideration. consequent on the presentation of a memorial so Pursuing bis inquiries further the reporter as-certained that the memorial had been obtained under the auspices of the Sabbath Committee. The offices of this committee are at the Bible House, and there was found Mr. Atterbury, the Secretary. In reply to inquiries Mr. Atterbury said that the memorial was in his possession; he presumed the memorialists intended ultimately to present it to the Board of Police Commissioners. It was at the request of the Sabbath Committee that the memorial, with its signatures, was published in the morning papers. He did not think that there was any intentional discourtesy in this. The Commissioners were enabled to see by this what the seeling of the committee and the community was, and they could take action upon it, if they desired, without waiting for the formal presentation of the memorial. In answer to inquiries as to what the committee proposed to accomplish in this new crusade on Sunday amusements, Mr. Asterbury said that all they sought was to see that the law was inforced. The wisdom of the Legislature fourteen years ago had declared what the law was in regard to this question, and it was simply the desire of the committee to see it enforced. On the general question as to the observance of the day the committee wished it to be distinctly understood that they had no desire to make people Christians by an act of the Legislature. They believed that the observance of Sunday was in harmony with the spirit of the people of the country; that in a free land like America it was incumbent upon those having anthority to take care that the people should be protected from a lie of excessive labor and that the Sabbath should be observed as a day of rest. They were of an opinion that there could be no lawful discrimination exercised as to the character of the places of amusement to be opened, and that to permit operas to be performed on Sunday evening, for example, would have the natural effect of opening all places of amusement on the evening of that day. If this were the case then would follow a general desecration of the day in the transaction of general business. Believing that this would be the effect of a relaxation of the law they intended to use every effort to uphold its integrity. The law of the State in reward to the christian community. There was nothing to prevent a repetition of these scenes if the law was virtually ignored by the Courts. For the accomplishment of this they intended to appear, by counsel, to obtain the removal of the injunction, when the case is argued before Judge Donohue. if they desired, without waiting for the formal presentation of the memorial. The following is the Sabbath act referred to:and performance.

SEC. 3.—This act shall take effect immediately.
[The above act was passed and signed by the Governor.
April 17, 1890.]

Mr. Algernon Sullivan's Views. A representative of the HERALD visited yester day several of the gentlemen whose names are affixed to the communication addressed to the Police Commissioners in reference to the Sunday law. Many denounced the entertainments as having an evil tendency, while others contended that if any law existed prohibiting theatrical perform ance on Sunday it should either be enforced or namented with two small bouquets of orange dowers and camelias, one worn from the corsage and the other at the throat. The sieeves were closed fitting and covered from the shoulder to the waist with point lace. Ruffles of boint lace surrounced the waist, half concealing the tiny, white-gloved hands. The veil was of rare maine net tulle, bordered with point lace to match the laces of the dress, and the handscrennel was of similar costly and delicate materiat. A fan of point lace, mounted with many colored pearls, completed one of the most exquisite bridai costumes ever worn by an American lady. The jewelry was diamonds of the finest water, the pature including a rich diamond necklace given by her father, and a beautiful diamond brooch, the gift of the groom, earlings, &c. She carried a small bouquet of orange blossoms, violets and camellas.

TOLLETS OF THE MOTHER AND SISTER.

Mrs. Whitam Sharon, the bride's mother, a gieterre lace. She wore an elegant diamond necklace, which oost $20,000, and was perfectly dazzling in its brilliancy.

Miss Flora Sharon, the bridesmaid, who is a piquante little lady of poished manners, wore an exquisitely tastend white tarletan, the skirt and boddice plated and ruched, the sieeves coming just below the elbow and similarly ornamented.
